INTERNATIONAL CHILD ABDUCTION

Has your child been taken or kept overseas by their other parent or a relative without your permission? Are you worried that this might happen? This leaflet will tell you what you can do and who to contact.

INTERNATIONAL CHILD ABDUCTION

WHAT CAN I DO IF I AM WORRIED THAT MY CHILD MIGHT BE ABDUCTED OVERSEAS?

- If you are not sure about your legal position in relation to your child, consider instructing a suitably qualified family lawyer immediately. You may need to get a residence (custody) or preventative court order to stop your child being taken out of the country. In England, Wales and Northern Ireland, you may need to apply to have your child made a ward of court, through which the court becomes a legal guardian of the child and can exercise its powers to back up its decisions on what is in that child's best interests.
- Contact reunite. This is a charity organisation which provides practical advice and information to parents and families whose children have been, or might be, abducted overseas. They can send you a pack that tells you how you can do your best to prevent child abduction.
- Write to the Identity and Passport Service (formerly known as the UK Passport Service), enclosing a copy of any court order and giving the expiry date, to ask them not to grant a British passport to your child without your permission. They can only do this in certain circumstances – you will need to contact them to find out when they can do this.
- If the other parent of your child is not British, they may be able to get a passport for the child from their own Embassy, High Commission or Consulate in this country. In that case, you or your lawyer may wish to write to the Embassy, High Commission or Consulate of the other parent's nationality asking them not to issue a passport to your child. They do not have to follow your instructions, but they may do so voluntarily.

- Contact your local police station. If the police are satisfied that the threat of abduction is real and imminent (that is, you think your child is likely to be taken overseas within 48 hours), they can contact the National Ports Office and ask them to alert all UK points of departure to try to prevent the abduction. This is called a 'Port Alert'.

WHAT CAN I DO IF MY CHILD HAS BEEN ABDUCTED OVERSEAS?

- Report it to the local police immediately. The parent who abducts the child may have committed a criminal offence in the UK. If it is not too late, the police may be able to stop your child being taken out of the country. If your child has been taken overseas but you do not know exactly where, the police can contact Interpol on your behalf. Interpol can work with overseas police forces to help find the child.
- Contact reunite. This is a charity organisation which provides practical advice and information to parents and families whose children have been, or might be, abducted overseas.
- Instruct a suitably qualified family lawyer in the UK who can provide you with legal advice. reunite has a list of lawyers who might be able to help. Depending on which country your child has been taken to, you may also need to appoint a lawyer overseas.
- Contact the Child Abduction Section at the Foreign and Commonwealth Office on 0207 008 0878 (or the FCO Response Centre on 020 7008 3350 outside of office hours). We can tell you whether the country that your child has been taken to has joined the Hague Convention on International Child Abduction (see below), and provide information about what you can do.

INTERNATIONAL CHILD ABDUCTION

WHAT IS THE HAGUE CONVENTION?

The 1980 'Hague Convention on the Civil Aspects of International Child Abduction' is an agreement between various countries which aims to ensure the return of an abducted child to the country where he or she normally lives, so that issues of residence (custody) and contact (access) can be decided by the courts of that country.

WHAT HAPPENS IF MY CHILD HAS BEEN TAKEN TO A COUNTRY THAT HAS JOINED THE HAGUE CONVENTION?

Contact the relevant UK Central Authority. There are contact details at the end of this leaflet:

- In England and Wales, the Central Authority is the International Child Abduction and Contact Unit in the Ministry of Justice.
- In Scotland it is the Scottish Government.
- In Northern Ireland it is the Northern Ireland Courts Service.

The UK Central Authority will handle your case. They may be able to make an application on your behalf under the Hague Convention to the foreign Central Authority. The Foreign and Commonwealth Office will not normally become involved in the case, unless the UK Central Authorities ask for our help.

WHAT HAPPENS IF MY CHILD HAS BEEN TAKEN TO A COUNTRY WHICH HAS NOT JOINED THE HAGUE CONVENTION?

If your child has been taken to a country that has not joined the Hague Convention, there may be no international systems in place to help you. In these cases you can:

- try to come to an agreement with the other parent; or
- start legal proceedings in the courts overseas.

If you cannot come to an agreement with the other parent, your only option will be to apply for custody and permission to bring your child back to the UK through the courts overseas. The Foreign and Commonwealth Office cannot interfere in foreign court proceedings and we cannot guarantee that your child will be returned to you.

WHAT CAN CONSULAR STAFF DO TO HELP IF YOUR CHILD HAS BEEN ABDUCTED?

We and our consular staff overseas are committed to giving British nationals all the support we properly can.

We can:

- provide a list of overseas lawyers (see note 1 below) who speak English (some will be specialists in family law);

NOTE 1

Neither the Government nor the relevant British Embassy, High Commission or Consulate can make any guarantee in relation to the professional ability or character of any person or company on the list, nor can they be held responsible in any way for you relying on any advice you are given.

INTERNATIONAL CHILD ABDUCTION

- get a welfare report; if you have contact details for your child and if the other parent agrees;
- if you do not know where your child is, we can contact the relevant authorities overseas to check what progress has been made in finding him/her;
- offer travel information and help with finding accommodation locally;
- help you contact the relevant local authorities and organisations when you are overseas;
- where appropriate, contact the courts overseas to express our interest in a case and ask about progress;
- in exceptional circumstances only, go to court hearings overseas;
- provide information about translation services;
- where appropriate, issue travel documents.

We cannot:

- “rescue” a child or get involved in any illegal attempts to bring a child back to the UK;
- locate your child if you do not know where he/she is;
- offer legal advice or interfere in the legal system of another country;
- pay your bills, including legal, translations, travel or accommodation;

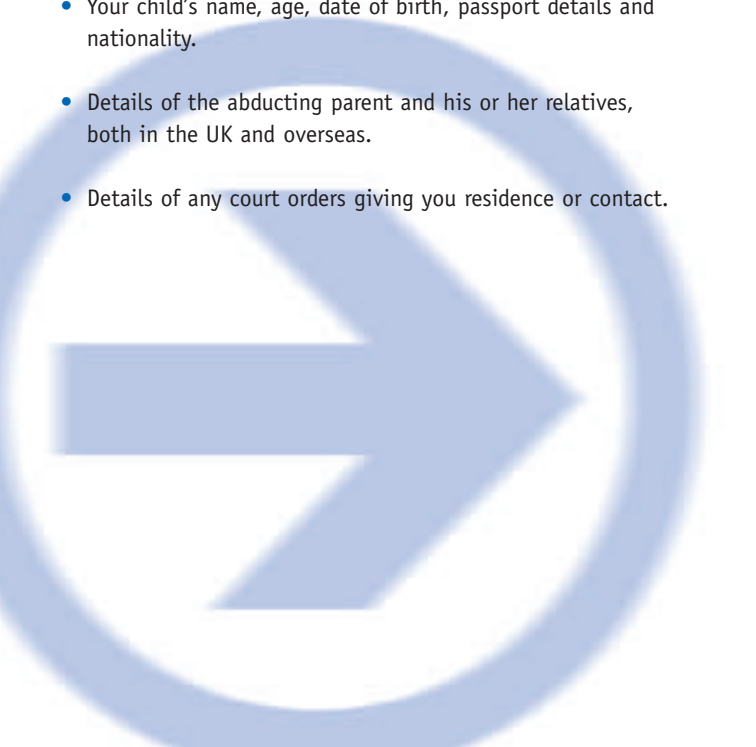

DUAL NATIONALITY

Dual nationality means being the national of more than one country. A child may be a dual national if they were born or lived overseas or if one of his or her parents holds the nationality of another country. If your child has been taken to the country of their second nationality, the authorities there may view your child as a national of that country. This may limit what we can do to help.

TAKING THE FIRST STEP

Before you call anyone, be prepared to provide the following information that can help others to help you.

- Your child's name, age, date of birth, passport details and nationality.
- Details of the abducting parent and his or her relatives, both in the UK and overseas.
- Details of any court orders giving you residence or contact.
